

Recognizing Learning 2018

Caring for adults using tools, systems and policies to make it happen

November 22-23, 2018 in Toronto

Recognizing skills and competencies is a priority in Canada. Our future prosperity depends upon our ability to assess and recognize the learning of all our citizens and newcomers. Don't miss a great opportunity to hear how others are creating new systems, using effective tools and enhancing policies to give adults in transition every opportunity to reach their personal and professional goals.

Recognition of prior learning (RPL) is a philosophy and a practice with immense value for those who work with adults. The main principle is that everyone has knowledge and skills that can, and should, be recognized. You can help adults identify and prove their learning by using reliable tools and supportive systems that take into account the unique needs of adults. Whether transferring academic credits, seeking completion of a formal diploma or submitting workplace competencies to employers for recognition, the use of quality RPL tools, systems and policies can make it happen for the adults who come to our organizations, institutions and agencies.

CAPLA has been showcasing the five 'need to know' areas associated with quality RPL practice – Advising, Assessing, Tools, Systems and Policies. This year we will focus on the three remaining domains:

TOOLS: enhancing website messages about evaluating skills • choosing a preferable assessment method

SYSTEMS: positioning learning recognition as part of recruitment, admissions or certification • making your procedures adult-friendly

POLICIES: identifying goals and using RPL to address issues about access, immigration, lifelong learning and workforce development • moving towards a preferred future

Whether you are new to RPL or an experienced professional, we know the event will be an important opportunity you won't want to miss. Network with others in the field and take home helpful resources to use within your professional practice. Helping people to achieve their educational and employment dreams is everybody's business. So join us in Toronto this November.
